Compostable Slippers

These Compostable slippers are made from materials which break down in a composting process through the action of naturally occurring micro-organisms within a specific timeframe. This occurs when compostable products reach their correct end of life, which is industrial composting.

The composting process in an industrial composting system is carefully monitored for temperature, moisture and oxygen, to ensure these materials fully degrade at optimum speed. These materials then break down into a mixture of decayed or decaying organic matter which can be used to fertilize soil.
